29th November 2021, London: Young Leaders from the worlds of activism, politics, business, and culture, will come together on 21 December in a first-of-its-kind event to discuss issues of anti-racism, climate action, and peace.

Space Transformers Live 2021 will welcome global speakers, from Nobel Peace Prize nominees to leading actors, renowned authors to Fridays for Future organisers. All Space Transformers will be under the age of 30, representing a new generation that is pivotal to the future of humanity and proving a powerful voice on justice, equality, and the environment.

Produced and directed by Jeremy Gilley of Peace One Day, the organisation behind #PeaceDay, Space Transformers Live has been established to provide young people from developed and developing countries alike a unique platform to inspire action and issue a challenge to national leaders. The event is supported by global institutions, including the UNESCO Mahatma Gandhi

Institute of Education for Peace and Sustainable Development, UN Department of Peace Operations, The Pathfinders for Peaceful Just and Inclusive Societies, the SDG Action Campaign, Kofi Annan Foundation and Peace Innovation Lab.

Supported in its awareness campaign by Twitter, this year's Peace Day Live event reached people in almost every single country in the world, with Peace One Day aiming to engage three billion people by 2025. Space Transformers Live is expected to achieve similarly international reach, energising young people from around the world.

Space Transformers Live will feature music from young international artists and words of peace from some of the world's leading young actors. Key interviews and panel discussions, under the guidance of young leaders in their areas, will be focused on transforming theory into practice and helping every member of the audience find ways to engage with issues of global concern.

The virtual event is free to watch at www.peaceoneday.org and @PeaceOneDay on Twitter. The experience will unite millions around the world for a day filled with hope, reflection, and connection!

Mitzi Jonelle Tan, Global Choices Arctic Angel and Climate Justice Activist, said: I'm so excited to participate in the Space Transformers Live on 21st of December by Peace One Day. This will highlight the voices of young individuals creating meaningful change with their community. Seeing and hearing the stories of different people inspire me everyday and I hope people tune in to support.

Susan Nakyung Lee, Core Delivery Team, Global Assembly COP26, said: My greatest hope is the generations after us can innovate to thrive, not just survive. At the Global Assembly, we are building a new infrastructure for global decision making that will play one part in enabling this.

Hajer Sharief, Libyan Peace and Human Rights Activist, Co-Founder Together We Build It, Extremely Together Young Leader, Kofi Annan Foundation said: Peace is a public good, so everyone should have the right to enjoying, building, making, and shaping peace.

Jeremy Gilley, Producer and Director of Space Transformers Live and Peace One Day Founder said: The individuals that are a part of Space Transformers Live are so inspiring. I am honoured to be producing and directing this experience. I know their stories are going to inform, inspire, and engage so many people.
